

You see a good slice of Arkansas in going to Hot Springs by way of Arkadelphia and returning home via Glenwood, Murfreesboro and Nashville — which is the route I took Sunday in attending the annual Spring meeting of the Associated Press at the Spa.

It had rained during the night, and there were a couple of drizzles north of Arkadelphia, but Hot Springs itself was dry. On the return I hit rain near Kirby, south of Glenwood, and again near Murfreesboro. It was that kind of a Spring day in Arkansas.

Going up to Hot Springs I found the State Highway Department is taking to heart the persistent criticism of its failure to provide safe shoulders on U. S. 67. State crews have laid miles of gravel shoulder north of Prescott.

But alas, it was a wet day — and one unfortunate driver of a huge tractor-trailer transport undertook to park on the new gravel shoulder. The wheel dove to the axle, hopelessly stuck — and an avalanche of mud for a hundred yards up the highway marked his path to ultimate grief.

Still further north another truck had gone off the road and turned over — but since it was on a curve I doubt whether the highway department had anything to do with it.

The Texarkana Gazette paid tribute Sunday to Louis Heilbron, who died last week, as a real estate financier who did the most for his generation in building up the border city.

The Texarkana Gazette reports: "W. R. Grim, Texarkana's great banker and city builder, once told a customer of his bank. 'You can depend upon what Louis Heilbron tells you about real estate and finance.'"

And the Gazette goes on to say: "Many Texarkana home owners will testify today if it had not been for Louis Heilbron and his sympathetic understanding of their problems, they could never have achieved ownership of their homes."

I never will forget the occasion when I met Mr. Heilbron during the great 1929-33 depression and was impolitic enough to say that I was honored to be a real estate expert, whose fame was known throughout the Southwest. He said sadly: "Son, I used to think I knew something about real estate."

It was the grim humor of a great citizen in his home town acknowledging the coming and going of the economic tides that no man knows or controls.

But he had honesty, faith and judgment. The country came back, and he with it.

The only men you are sure of are those who have been through tough times. I was very sure of Mr. Heilbron — as were all the host who knew him.

Memorial day must be the time when we dedicate ourselves to the very few certainties that exist in this uncertain world. And No. 1 of this precious few is the loyalty that causes men to go out and die in defense of their native land.

I think of the magnificent letters that came across this desk during World War II, from fighting men. And I think of one who wrote an account of his life and his fellow countrymen, who sheltered from wrecked Liberators on the North African shore, for brief moments of rest between bombing raids — and his last letter arrived simultaneously with news of his death.

The story goes back to the men of all wars.

When peace is long in the land we become heedless and cocksure. But these are uncertain times — the Allies have had to put the Air Force to work at Berlin — and therefore we do full justice to this Memorial day.

Police Probe Death of U. S. Treasurer

Washington, May 30 — (UP) — Police in nearby Bethesda, Md., today investigated the circumstances surrounding the death of William A. Julian, publicity-shy treasurer of the United States for the past 16 years.

Julian was killed instantaneously early yesterday when his car collided head on with an auto driven by William Ellis, a 37-year-old Negro. Ellis suffered severe lacerations.

At the time of the accident, the elderly financial expert was on his way to the Burning Tree golf club for his weekly Sunday morning game.

Police said Julian apparently ran into Ellis while making a sharp left turn into the club grounds. He said it would be up to the state's attorney to decide if any legal action is warranted after they place all the facts before him for review.

His associates said that Julian will probably be buried in Cincinnati, O., his "adopted" home town. He was born in Kentucky.

As treasurer of the United States, it was Julian's duty to supervise the income and expenditure of all federal money. His name has appeared on all U. S. dollar bills issued since he took office, and treasury officials estimated that Julian's signature has been engraved on fully $90,000,000 worth of U. S. currency since 1933.

He kept his age a closely-guarded secret, but associates said that he must have been "at least" 85 years old. Secretary of Treasury John W. Snyder said that Julian's sudden death was a "distinct shock."

Little American Flags Wave Over Graves of Nation's War Dead This Memorial Day

By The Associated Press

Little American flags waved above the graves of the nation's war dead today. Memorial day dedicated to their memory and to the hope that peace may reign supreme.

In proclaiming the day of honor for "our heroic dead," President Truman said this is a fitting occasion when—

"The people of our nation x x x may appeal to Almighty God for help in turning the steps of history to the paths of permanent peace."

At home and overseas, the graves of soldiers, sailors, marines, airmen and coast guardsmen were each assigned an American flag. Wreaths and other tributes of flowers were in addition.

Speeches of gratitude for those who gave their lives were mixed with reminders that living Americans owe them the assurance that they did not die in vain.

"The account can be marked 'paid in full,'" said Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson, "only when we can guarantee their wives, their sons and daughters a strong America free from the threat of another war. x x x Peace through strength must be our goal."

The other leaders of the military departments spoke similarly in their Memorial day statements.

Gordon Gray, acting secretary of the army, said that while remembering the sacrifices of those who died for the ideals of America, "we must do everything in our power to further those ideals."

For the navy, Secretary Francis Matthews said: "We have no higher duty today in memory of the dead of our wars x x x than to pledge ourselves anew to keep the navy as always a worthy member of the unified defense team which helps to guarantee our security and the peace of the world."

Secretary of the Air Symington expressed the air force's tribute to those who died and said honor goes to those who returned to work in peace as in war "to preserve our American heritage."

Gen. Omar Bradley, army chief of staff, put in a special word of remembrance for those who returned only to spend long months in veterans' hospitals.

For official Washington, and for the thousands of visitors here for the day, the highlight was the traditional laying of a wreath at the tomb of the unknown soldier in Arlington national cemetery.

More Arkansas Colleges Award Degrees

By UNITED PRESS

The graduates of three more Arkansas colleges received their degrees yesterday, and commencement exercises are planned today for two other schools.

Receiving their diplomas yesterday were graduating seniors in Arkansas State Teachers college at Conway, Hendrix college at Conway, and Arkansas Baptist college at Little Rock. Exercises were planned today at Arkansas college in Batesville and Henderson State Teachers college at Arkadelphia.

Dr. Nolen M. Irby, president of State Teachers, presented degrees to 233 students. Of that number, 201 were bachelor of science in education, 22 bachelor of science, nine bachelor of arts, and one bachelor of music in education.

The speaker was Dr. Frederick B. Davis, head of the psychology department at George Peabody college for teachers in Nashville, Tenn. He advocated a more adequate system of school examinations to better qualify high school teachers as vocational counselors.

"Tests employed by our army during the war showed the advantages of being able to classify individual talents," he declared. "We need to use talent to its maximum advantage in a democratic society."

A total of 115 received diplomas and degrees at Hendrix college from the hand of Dr. Matt L. Ellis, called president. They included 60 bachelor of arts, 29 bachelor of science, six bachelor of music and 11 associate of art diplomas.

Ben H. Wooten, a Dallas, Tex., banker, was the commencement speaker. He said that the basis of success consists of ambition, thrift, character and a willingness to accept responsibility.

"Success is not a matter of luck or getting up in the world by knocking the other fellow down," he declared.

Civil War Scars Are Being Forgotten — We Have Deeper Scars to Keep Us United

By HAL BOYLE

New York, (AP) — The earth is a tomb of dead armies.

And very soon indeed it will swallow the last survivors of the American civil war.

On this Memorial Day, 84 years after Lee offered his sword in surrender, Grant at Appomattox, only a handful are left.

Just how many no one knows. Life magazine, after a nationwide search, discovered a few unlisted by veterans' organizations or state and federal pension officials.

It publishes in its current issue pictures of 30 Union and 38 Confederate survivors.

But before the issue was distributed one of the Union men — William Magee, 102, of Los Angeles — was dead. Each month or so here, another there, goes to join his spectral comrades in blue and gray.

It isn't particularly a tribute to Southern hardboiled that there are more Confederate veterans alive. The South, drained of manpower, had to take its soldiers younger, including boy volunteers of ten.

It will be a tremendous event in American history when the last of these grizzled veterans passes, and the grisly Civil War enters into legend. The earth then will hold in silence all of the 3,000,000 or more men who fought in the famous war of brother against brother.

There was probably history's first billion-dollar war. The price was the grisly Civil War, but that bill was paid long ago. The bill in terms of dollars is still being paid.

The bill for the four-year fight cost the North alone $300,000,000, some 110,000 combat dead and 221,791 lives lost by disease. The North eventually also will have paid out an additional $800,000,000 in pension and compensation claims be-

Congressmen Still Talk of Spending Slash

Washington, May 30 — The talk of cutting government spending kept rolling today, with Chairman McKellar (D-Tenn.) of the senate appropriations committee saying:

"I think some way can be found to make more cuts."

Senators Edwin C. Johnson (D Colo.) and McClellan (D Ark.) in separate interviews also expressed hope of economy, but they did not go so far as to say that it would come to pass.

Despite much demand for trimming expenses, congress has not done much in a way that will stick. McKellar noted there have been some savings, then added: "But they are not enough."

Private predictions came this weekend from a administration sources that spending actually will be more in the new fiscal year beginning July 1 than it has been during the year now ending. Further, these officials said spending will continue to increase in the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1951.

These officials, who asked not to be quoted by name, said that greater spending is to be expected from increased outlays for such things as farm price supports, the handling of unemployment compensation funds, costs of job placement, etc.

While appropriations are primarily a matter for McKellar's committee, economy proposals are coming up also before the senate expenditures committee headed by McClellan.

President Truman has spending plans for about $42,000,000,000 in the upcoming fiscal year, and McClellan said a preliminary survey indicates that much of it is unobtainable.

"Veterans' benefits, interest on the public debt and other governmental obligations fall into this category."

State Health Department to Launch Cleanup Drive Against Syphilis June 1

Little Rock, May 30 — Approximately seven out of every hundred Hempstead County residents have syphilis or some other venereal disease and the U. S. Public Health Service has joined with the Arkansas State Board of Health in a statewide campaign to do something about it.

Starting June 1, this double-barreled attack on Syphilis the cleaner, a recognized cause of insanity, heart disease, babies born blind and many other of mankind's ills, is going to send — health authorities hope — at least 5,000 Arkansayers to seek their doctors and local health departments.

Although the test for syphilis is comparatively simple, a few drops of blood examined by an expert. Mr. Averge Man and his wife apparently nurse a notion that "they are immune. Consequently they refuse to have the test."

Dr. T. T. Ross, state health officer, kicked off the campaign with the announcements that Arkansas health workers and physicians have found more cases of congenital syphilis than have been found in any other state but happily, Arkansas has the best facility in the nation for treating syphilis — the Hot Springs Medical Center.

"Syphilis can be cured in its early stages by the use of penicillin," said Dr. Ross. "Even in advanced cases this drug can and will stop the damage and arrest the case. Our problem here in Arkansas is to discover the folks who have syphilis and who can be sure he hasn't got it without taking a blood test? — and to tell them the score."

The score is simply this, warned Dr. Ross, if infected either by a private physician or take advantage of the free hospitalization and treatment at the Hot Springs Rapid Treatment Center, a matter of from five to eight days.

Some interesting facts have come out of the work of the Delta Plantation Survey comprising three teams of fact-finders now busy giving free blood tests. One of these facts is that east and south Arkansas have more syphilis than other sections of the state. The level of syphilis falls wherever the level of education rises.

Dr. Edgar J. Easley, director of the Venereal Disease Control Division of the State Board of Health, detailed procedure for the coming VD campaign. Every possible means is going to be utilized — to slay over the fact that anyone can have syphilis and not even know it. Newspaper and other advertising will be used as fully as possible in a 75-county effort to raise the "index of suspicion" or start worrying in other words. The only possible way to be sure there is no infection is to get a blood test either at the office of a local physician or at any local health department. Campaign advertising is going to carry the slogan: "If you can't pay, go anyway."

Whether it's referred to as "Bad blood" or "social disease" or "what have you," syphilis is a slow killing curse that is currently draining away millions of dollars worth of energy from Arkansas business, agriculture and industry.

Recent figures show there is twice as much syphilis as tuberculosis in the state. It is a hundred times more than infantile paralysis.

Part of Ford Strikers Go Back to Work

Detroit, May 30 — (AP) — About 1,200 Ford maintenance workers returned to their jobs today at the conclusion of the CIO United Auto Workers 24-day strike.

But the Ford Motor Co. estimated it may be two weeks before full production is resumed in all its plants and 100,000 employees are back on the job.

An agreement leaving the main issue in the speed-up dispute to arbitration was reached Sunday after days of steady negotiations. About 65,000 UAW members employed in the Lincoln Rouge and Lincoln plants ratified it by big margins at meetings later in the day.

Ironically, neither company nor union will know for sometime who actually won the strike that cost Ford and the workers an estimated $77,000,000.

Attempts to select either a single arbitrator or a three-man board will begin tomorrow.

Meanwhile, Ford speeded arrangements to get assembly lines rolling again in its big industrial empire.

Maintenance workers at the Lincoln plant started back Friday. The rest of Lincoln's 6,000 employees are to be recalled tomorrow, together with 16,000 of the 59,000 workers at the huge Rouge plant.

While production is getting under way again, three-man subcommittees from the company and union will try for three days, starting Tuesday, to select a single arbitrator to settle their differences.

If they fail, each side will name one member of a three-man board. The selected third party will try to choose a third party within a limited time. Should they be unable to agree, the post will go to Dr. Harry Shulman, impartial umpire under the Ford contract.

The settlement, Ford agreed to rescind disciplinary action against 33 strike leaders in the union.

Negotiators who labored long for the settlement will not be able to remain away from the bargaining table for long.

He referred to John S. Bugas, Ford vice president in charge of industrial relations, who headed the company team in the strike talks and will play the same role when the company and union start discussing contract.

Holiday Death Toll Stands at 238

The highway deaths were only 65 below the total which the National Safety council has predicted would be killed in automobile accidents over the weekend by mid-night tonight. The council estimated that 30,000,000 automobiles would be on the highways in the three-day period.

The deaths by states (traffic, drowning, miscellaneous):

He made the announcement at the annual spring meeting of the Arkansas Associated Press here yesterday.

Plans for the third annual competition will be announced soon.

The AP organization re-elected Allen Tilden of Arkansas Democrat, Little Rock, chairman Alex Washington, Hope Star, vice chairman, and Sam Gearhart of the Fayetteville Northwest Arkansas Times director of a five-year term.

Associated Press General Executive Frank King of Dallas attended the meeting.

Flowers Placed on War Memorial at Courthouse

The Alpha Zeta chapter of Beta Sigma Phi sorority placed flowers at the War Memorial monument Monday, one o'clock, in memory of those who gave their lives and also placed flowers on the grave of Fred Formby, war hero, who was killed in an automobile accident on the Memorial also.

Vishinsky to Question Foreign Ministers

Paris, May 30 — (AP) — Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky, who rose to fame as prosecutor at the 1937 Moscow "purge" trials, is expected to cross-examine the foreign ministers of the Western powers today.

Vishinsky reportedly has a barrage of questions ready on the Bonn constitution for a West German federal republic to Eastern Germany.

He is to meet with Secretary of State Dean Acheson, Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin and Foreign Minister Robert Schuman at 9:30 a. m., Eastern Standard Time.

Authoritative sources in the Western camp predicted the Russians eventually would reject the Western offer. These sources feel no doubt that pro-Western groups will win a free election in all Germany and the iron curtain will be pushed back to the Polish and Czechoslovak frontiers.

The Russian foreign minister is expected to shower the West with a lengthy interrogation on each phase of the Joint American-British-French project submitted to the four-power foreign ministers' council Saturday.

U.S. Cautioned About New Weapons

Washington, May 30 —(AP)—Fleet Admiral William F. Halsey today cautioned the nation against pinning its defense on "unproved weapons" and declared the aircraft carrier is "the most potential preserver of peace in our bag of tricks."

In an address at a Memorial Day program, Halsey did not mention directly the defense department's recent order halting work on the navy's proposed super-carrier.

But the retired "bull" of the Pacific sea war roared into the controversy over the air force's high-flying B-36 long range bomber.

Halsey declared he has seen navy jet fighters zoom from a carrier deck in "a matter of minutes" to the 40,000-foot altitude at which the B-36 operates. He said he was "amazed" at claims the bomber is "vulnerable to fighter interception."

"There is no cheap and easy way to win wars, and we cannot place too much reliance upon unproved weapons," he told the Fleet Reserve association.

"Our navy, your army, and your air force will all be necessary. We must protect our time-tested weapons against the over-zealous utterances of the so-called extremists."

Halsey said he was "anxiously awaiting" a suggested test between the B36 and the navy's carrier-based jets proposed by the house armed services committee. Aim of the mock battle is to settle the debate whether the big bomber makes it less necessary to support strong naval force of naval carriers.

Halsey described the carrier as "the spearhead, the cutting edge, of modern naval power, particularly in the Pacific."

"The air force has acquired a gradually increasing importance in our national defense," he went on, "and that importance is readily acknowledged by both the army and the navy."

No Satisfactory Explanation to Considerable Socialist Losses to Conservatives

By DeWITT MacKENZIE
AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

The very considerable Socialist losses to Conservatives in recent county council elections in Britain have given rise to widespread debate as to the reasons for these setbacks to the nation's ruling party.

This far no explanation which is widely satisfactory has been evolved, even in England. In general it seems to be agreed that such elections often are governed by purely local conditions and sentiment, and don't necessarily reflect the views of the voters on national matters. That is, the same districts might give an entirely different vote in a national election such as is due next year.

However, there is an observant school which feels the Conservative (Tory, some call it) vote does in considerable degree reflect the opposition of those classes of society which are against the Socialist program of nationalization. Many Conservatives feel (rightly or wrongly) that this program is aimed at the destruction of private initiative and the leveling off of individual incomes.

Be that as may, it's true that in comes in Britain are fast being leveled off, though in all fairness it must be recorded that the leveling off process was going on under conservative rule long before the Socialists took over. As this column previously has pointed out, the so-called landed gentry is disappearing rapidly under the very heavy taxation.

Death duties are so terrific that frequently an heir has to sell much of his property in order to meet taxes. When it happens, as I have seen it in England, that property changed hands twice within a year or so because of deaths, then the estate may be virtually wiped out, both money and real estate.

British Chancellor of the Exchequer Sir Stafford Cripps recently stated during a speech in commons that the number of net incomes over 5,000 pounds sterling ($20,000), after taxation had dropped from a prewar figure of 11,000 to 250 now. It really is amazing to find that Britain can produce only 250 people with net incomes over $20,000.

Approximately of this situation, the editor of Burke's Peerage, which lists royalty and folks with titles, recently reported that they had lost track of thirteen baronets. These are knights who have hereditary titles. Since this announcement a couple of the "missing" men have turned up as follows: Sir Norman Hamilton Fring is serving drinks at a hotel in Worcester. He laughingly explains that he has the idea of setting a job as manager of a country hotel, and took his present job to get experience. Sir John Henry Dunn, son of a former lord mayor of London, was found checking coal trucks as they came from an open pit mine near Barnsley.

A striking example of highly placed folks being squeezed financially is the case of the famous Earl Mountbatten and his wife, Mountbatten, great grandson of Queen Victoria and thirteenth vicar of India. is one of the most notable figures in the British empire.

Recently the Countess Mountbatten asked the House of Lords to let her do what she wishes with the inheritance of 1,400,000 pounds ($3,600,000) which her grandfather, Sir Ernest Cassel left her. Under his will she can draw only the income from this sum and can't touch the capital. Only the House

Doctor's Wife Won't Visit Him in Jail

Cedar Rapids, Ia., May 30 —(UP)—Dr. Robert C. Rutledge's blonde wife, Sydney, today kept her promise never to visit him in jail.

Mrs. Rutledge, 23, left town without visiting the jail where the 29-year-old Sydney was held yesterday awaiting sentencing for the murder of Byron Hattman, her alleged seducer.

The six-foot-tall beauty went with her parents, Dr. and Mrs. Howard Goodrich, to their home at Hannibal, Mo., yesterday after hearing her husband declared guilty of second degree murder Saturday.

Goodrich said his son-in-law had exacted a promise from Mrs. Rutledge to stay away from his jail cell.

"I never want her to see me in jail," Goodrich quipped Rutledge.

"She was very anxious to see him," the girl's father said. "But she respects his judgment. She never has seen him in jail and for the present she will keep her promise." Goodrich said Rutledge was "very non-committal" when he visited the handcuffed doctor yesterday. He said his daughter was "doing as well as can be expected."

Rutledge's parents, Dr. and Mrs. Robert Rutledge of Houston, Tex., also were staying at the Goodrich home.

A district court jury of nine men and three women found Rutledge guilty Saturday night of stabbing Hattman to death in a hotel room here last Dec. 14.

The conviction carries a sentence of 10 years to life. But Judge J. E. Hoiserman gave defense attorneys until July 1 to ask for a new trial. If no such motion is entered, he will pronounce sentence shortly after July 1.

The jury, deliberating three hours and 41 minutes, reached its decision on the fourth ballot.

Negro Taken From Jail, Lynched

Irwinton, Ga., May 30 —(AP)—A young Negro accused of shooting at a white man here last night, was taken from jail by a mob here last night. His body was found today at nearby Sandy Creek.

First reports did not disclose the cause of death. The Negro had been arrested after Sheriff George Hatcher charged he was fired upon at a juke joint where he had gone to quiet a disturbance.

The Negro was Claip Hill, 29. Word of his death was received by the sheriff's wife in a telephone call from Sandy Springs.

Mrs. Hatcher said a group of white men drove up to the jail last night while her husband was absent and demanded the Negro. They took him away.

The sheriff had gone back to the juke joint to get his pistol, which he had lost in the earlier melee with Hill.

Police Chief J. Fountain of nearby McIntyre gave the following account of incidents leading up to Hill's abduction:

Sheriff Hatcher received a call concerning a disturbance at a night spot operated for Negroes. He arrested and put handcuffs on Hill and then felt his gun being removed from his pocket. He turned quickly but the Negro wrestled with him and fired at the sheriff.

The law enforcement officer shouted for help, but none of the other Negroes in the establishment came to his rescue at first. Eventually another Negro handed him a gun and the sheriff marched Hill off to jail.

Gen. Clark Pays Visit to Anzio Battlefield

Anzio, Italy, May 30 —(UP)—Gen. Mark W. Clark returned to this battlefield of the second world war today for memorial ceremonies at the graves of 11,000 American soldiers.

The ceremony was attended by U.S. Army officers, Italian officials and local farmers and townspeople. He recalled that five years ago he stood on the same spot and promised the liberation of Rome. The promise was fulfilled five days later.

"You will recall," Clark said, "that when we captured Naples the enemy put out propaganda similar to that emanating at present from other sources to the effect that America was seeking territorial gains, that we would conquer Italy and divide up her land among the victors."

"This reduction has coincided with an ever increasing range of public duties which have involved them in heavy personal expenditures."

What has happened to the Mountbattens has happened to a lot of others whose names aren't recorded in the hall of fame. England is leveling off.

ISLAND OF ESCAPE

By Hugh Lawrence Nelson

The Story: Bea Cosgrove, unsatisfied that one of her companions on Speare Island, Lilly Warren, committed suicide, has been carrying on an investigation.

Henry Gough Harding, owner of the island, has told her reasons for wanting to escape the world and establish a "New Eden." He has been in search of a woman like his mother, he says and wishes to create a "living monument" to her. Harding asks Bea if it would be wise to ask Mollie Stark to be his wife. Mollie, shipwrecked there a few days before, seems to Bea to be dim-witted and mercenary, but it is obvious she has Harding under her thumb. Bea reveals her thoughts and tells Harding he must answer the question himself. As Bea leaves Harding's room, Mollie sneers at her.

determined to let his acuteness control her future actions. If he made an opportunity to talk to her, she would follow a certain path.

"I think I have something for you," "Spill it," Fred said.

"Meet me in the storeroom, by the funicular early in the morning. Daylight."

At dawn she slipped on her dress, carried her shoes in her hand as she went silently down the stairs and around the house to the storeroom entrance.

Fred Sillwell waited for her. "This better be good," he snapped. "Go ahead. What you got to show me? We have to be quick before the others are up and about."

"It doesn't matter if they are," Bea said. She put on her shoes. "As long as they didn't see us

Mollie jumped to her feet. "Well I don't want to talk to you! I won't talk to you. Not after what you've done." She raced to the tower room and slammed the door behind her.

Harding strode from the room in silence. Mabel Jones began clearing away, rattling dishes to cover Nona's humming of "Happy Days are Here Again."

Bea Cosgrove found him at the sheep pen, arms resting on the barrier. He looked at her blankly. "How many sheep are there supposed to be?" She asked.

"There were 20," he said. "Miss Cosgrove, what's the matter with her this morning? I don't understand it. I wanted to talk to her, ask her to marry me, and she acts like she did. Do you know what she said?"

"She's jealous. She was awake when I came down from the tower last night. She saw me."

"But we didn't do anything to make her jealous!" Does she know that? She saw me coming down. Have you ever taken her up there?"

"Of course not!" Harding snapped. "I wouldn't ask a girl like Mollie to go alone to my room!"

Bea let it pass. "Well that's what she said." "Jealous!" Henry Harding said. "So that's it!" He beamed. His chest expanded. "The poor girl. Why that's wonderful. He hurried toward the house."

Fred Sillwell sauntered around the room, made his way eventually to stand beside Bea Cosgrove at the front window. "Well?" he said softly.

At the table when she had given Sillwell a covert signal, she had

Rita's Latest Husband May One Day Be Spiritual Leader of Millions of Mohammedians

By DEWITT MacKENZIE

AP Foreign Affairs Analyst
Her Highness Rita Hayworth has married into a position which is unique, or will be when her husband, Prince Aly Khan, succeeds his father, the Aga Khan, as head of the great Ismailiah sect of Mohammedans.

The Aga Khan's religious title is Iman, which is somewhat similar to that of caliph. He claims direct descent from the prophet Mohammed, and as Iman is spiritual leader of millions of many millions of people in India, Afghanistan, Khorasan, Persia, Arabia, Central Asia, Syria and Morocco. There is no other position comparable to this.

The Aga Khan also has the title of prince, and is addressed as "your highness," like the now de-throned Indian maharajahs. This title also is accorded his sons. Thus Rita will be called princess, and in due course presumably will have the distinction of being the wife of the Iman, since Aly is heir to that position.

Being a purely spiritual ruler, the Aga Khan has no palace (Aga Hall) in Bombay and mansions in other places. So his reputedly vast income (apart from what he derives from the fortune amassed by himself and his predecessors) comes from offerings from his followers. What these donations amount to hasn't been disclosed to the public. Obviously the total could be huge, but here it should be noted that the Aga Khan gives big sums for charitable purposes among his people.

Many think that the Aga Khan is weighed in a balance against gold or diamonds every year. That's a fiction, though a pleasing one.

His highness was weighed against gold—and he tips the scales at an eighth of a ton—on his golden jubilee as Iman. He was twice weighed against diamonds on

DOROTHY DIX

Divorce With Bonus

Dear Dorothy Dix: My wife and I have been married for 14 years. We have a lovely home. She has never wanted for anything. I have been very faithful to her all these years and we have been very happy together. But six weeks ago an old flame of hers came to see her and told her that he still loved her. He is married and has two children, and he has not been able to divorce his wife as she has given him no cause.

But now my wife wants me to give her a divorce so she can marry this man. She also wants me to sell our home and divide all of our property 50-50. I love my home and my wife and I don't want to give either one up. She has absolutely no grounds for divorce as I have been very good to her all through the years.

Do you think I should give her a divorce and sell my home just so she can go to another man?

Answer: Your wife must think you are of an exceedingly accommodating disposition if she thinks that you will sell your home in order to finance her love affair with another man. Apparently the lady had no fault to find with you as a husband until the old sweetheart bobbed up, and as she wants to be paid for divorcing you, while you want to keep her, it doesn't look as if she would have a very good case in court.

One of the things in marriage that would be humorous if it were not so tragic, is the way so many men and women revert to their first loves long after they have married, reared a family, and lived a comfortable, contented life. Darby and Joan live together. It is the eternal craving for romance, for youth, of those who realize that they are hearing the last call to the dining car and who feel that they must have one more bite of the cake.

Nostalgia For Youth
It is this nostalgia for lost youth that is at the bottom of so many divorces of elderly people. It is what ails your wife and this other woman's husband. They delude themselves into thinking that their great love was for their boy or girl sweetheart. They do not realize that glamor is a garment we wear but once.

So my advice to you is not to give your wife a divorce, but to let her have her little romance about her first love. Our first sweethearts would bore most of us to death if we had much of their society.

Dear Dorothy Dix: I am a girl of 19. For the past two years I have lived away from home with working my parents' great me as and we had loads of fun together.

Now that I am back at home and working my parents' great me as if I were a small child. Every time I say I am going somewhere no matter how innocent it is, they put me through the third degree about where I am going, why I am going, whom I expect to see and so on and on and on. They even disapprove of my spending the night with my best girl friend and think there is some deep, dark plot attached to it.

My brother, who is only 15 months older than I am, is free to go and come as he pleases, but I am practically a prisoner. I know my parents love me, and want to be kind, but I just can't stand living at home any more and treated like a baby. What can I do?

Answer: Nothing, except, leave home and that you don't want to do. But your parents are like many other fathers and mothers — they are sold on the idea that a 19-year-old girl hasn't enough sense to keep out of the fire and that if they don't watch her at every turn she will lead an abandoned life.

Why parents think that girls who have intelligence enough to hold down good jobs and who have made themselves self-supporting are so feeble-minded that they can't be trusted to take care of the money they earn, and that they think that a girl who works every day side by side with men, who treat her just as they would their own sisters, is in mortal danger of being ruined if she goes out with one of these same men to the movies, no one knows.

But it explains why girls leave home; why they don't confide in Mother, and why so many girls marry to get a little freedom.

Dear Miss Dix: I am going with a man who is about 23 years old and I am only 18. I am very fond of him, but he only comes to see me once a week. I telephone him every other night because he asks me to do so. Do you think it is wrong for me to call him?

Answer: There is nothing wrong about it, but it is the worst possible policy. When you throw yourself at a man's head, he always dodges. If you want a boy to come to see you, never ask him when he is coming, or try to pin him down to a date. Make yourself as interesting as you can. Show him that you enjoy his society. But make him feel that you can take him or leave him.

Withers Now for Labor Bill Amendments

Washington, May 30 —(AP)— Another Democratic senator who once opposed any changes in the administration's labor bill came out today for a series of amendments. Senator Withers (D-Ky.), a member of the senate labor committee, predicted "tough sailing" for the bill even if the amendments he has in mind are adopted.

The senate may start debating the administration's Taft-Hartley repealer this week, although the state department is urging action first on ratification of the Atlantic treaty.

Proponents of the administration labor bill are claiming powerful support from a Republican-written substitute measure. The substitute, offered by GOP Senators Taft (Ohio), Donnell (Mo.) and Smith (N.J.), would make 28 changes in the Taft-Hartley law but preserve what the sponsors call the basic principles of the law.

Withers told a reporter today that he now has decided to vote for at least five amendments he expects to be offered when the bill comes up in the senate. The Kentucky lawmaker said he is keeping the bill to see if he can change it to his liking.

1. Give the president limited authority to seize struck plants or industries in national emergency situations.

2. Require both management and labor officials to sign affidavits that they are not Communists or fascists.

Memorial Day, Born in South, Is Now Global

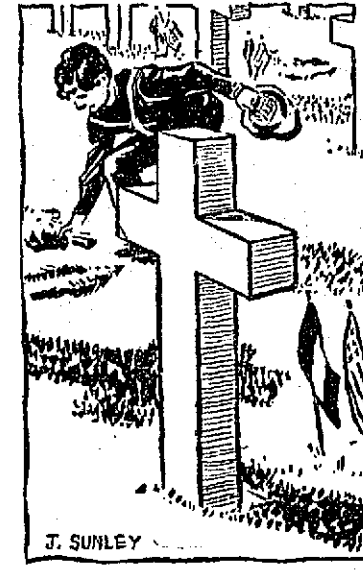

Memorial Day, fittingly enough, was inspired by the South, whose country was the chief battleground of the War Between the States. In March, 1868, Mrs. John A. Logan, wife of the famous Union commander, visited battlefields in Virginia. She was particularly touched by the way graves of Confederate dead were decorated with flowers and tiny Confederate flags. General Logan...

... was much interested in her account, agreed it was a beautiful custom and, as Commander-in-Chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, issued his famous General Order No. 11, designating May 30, 1868, as the day when the G. A. R. should decorate graves of comrades who died in defense of their country. The order was obeyed by G. A. R. posts, and by May 30, the next year...

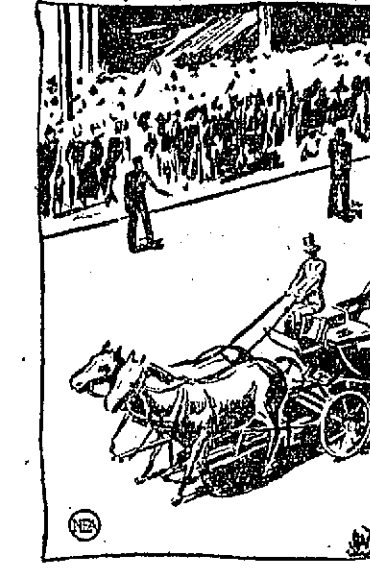

Memorial Day was fully established as a regular institution through most of the country. Because of its original purpose—the decoration of soldiers' graves—its formal observance had a military aspect from the first. For many years the day was in charge of the G. A. R. posts of every community. Observance consisted of a military and civic parade to the cemetery for appropriate exercises. Leading citizens and outstanding veterans made memorial addresses. A flag was placed on every soldier's grave, which was strewn with flowers. Firing squads volleyed over the graves as the bugler sounded "Taps." Today the exercises are much the same, except that the American Legion is in charge and the parade now includes civic officials, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts and fraternal organizations. Also Memorial Day's scope...

... widened as North and South united to fight foreign foes in new wars. After the Spanish-American War, Memorial Day ceremonies included honors for veterans of that conflict and the posts of the Spanish-American War Veterans contributed marchers to every parade. Its observance became international when, following World War I, the grateful French people decorated graves in American military cemeteries in France. American graves in England and other European countries were also decorated. After World War II, Memorial Day became truly a global institution, for on May 30 honor is paid to American fighters whose final resting places are scattered from Germany to Africa and from Australia to Okinawa and all the seas between. Usually a legal holiday, May 30 is observed...

... in all states of the Union, the District of Columbia and the territories and possessions except in certain of the Southern states that prefer their own appointed time to observe Confederate Memorial Day, sponsored by the Daughters of the Confederacy and the Confederate Southern Memorial Associations. April 26 is Confederate Memorial Day in Alabama, Florida, Georgia and Mississippi. In Louisiana and Tennessee, June 3, Jefferson Davis' birthday, is observed as Memorial Day. North and South Carolina set aside May 10, while Virginia observes May 30 as Confederate Memorial Day. Attempts have been made to merge all observances into an International Memorial Day on May 30, but without success. Many southerners feel that as the idea of Memorial Day started in the South, and was adopted by the North, any change of dates should conform to the April 26 commemoration rather than the later date.

Three Escape Texarkana Federal Prison

Texarkana, May 30 —(AP)— Three prisoners escaped ingeniously from the Miller county (Ark.) jail early today.

Road blocks were set up in southwest Arkansas and east Texas, but no sign of the trio had been found six hours after the escape.

Sheriff W. E. Davis identified the escapees as Sherman Cowdin, 38, of Sneyreport, La., held on federal charges of transporting a stolen automobile across a state line; Lerne William Tunnell, 22, of Texarkana, Ark., held on state charges of burglary and grand larceny.

The sheriff explained the three men's getaway, which he said occurred between midnight and 2 a. m.

The trio dug through the floor of a plumbing closet in the jail, on the fourth floor of the county court house, crawling through the hole, they squeezed through the space between the floor and the ceiling of the third story and then dug through the ceiling of another plumbing closet located on the third story.

From the third story closet they walked down a corridor and a stairway to a second floor and entered the county Road Cross of office. They fashioned a ladder from ropes torn off venetian blinds and used it to reach the courthouse lawn.

Most of the federal, Arkansas and Texas officers in the area joined in the intensive hunt for the trio.

Strikers in Bolivia Kill Two Americans

La Paz, Bolivia, May 30 —(AP)— Two of seven American engineers seized as hostages by strikers at the Patino tin mines have been reported killed. A third American is missing.

The angry strikers hurled dynamite bombs at troops sent to the mines. Casualties, mostly among the soldiers, were said to number almost 105.

D. C. Derringer, general manager of the Patino mines in Catavi, said in a telephone interview the dead men were T. H. O'Connor of Pasadena, Calif., and Albert Krefft of Seattle, Wash. He said a Bolivian engineer named Vargas also was killed.

Derringer said the three were among 15 hostages seized by the rioting strikers Saturday.

Derringer said the missing man is H. T. Peterson of Bismarck, Minn.

The American embassy sent a plane to the Catavi region to evacuate relatives and dependents of American employees in the mines. The miners struck at the mine, near Catavi, 200 miles southeast of La Paz, Saturday, in protest against the arrest and deportation of several union leaders.

'Tulsa' Scenes Made in the Oil City

The life of a motion picture producer is far from being a placid existence. In addition to the myriad problems concerned with the producing of "Tulsa," Walter Wanger had to worry about adding ammunition to the long-standing friendly warfare between Oklahoma's two leading cities, Oklahoma City and Tulsa.

From the first day when he announced plans for his Technicolor spectacle, "Tulsa," with the grimacing to take place in Oklahoma, Wanger was besieged with offers of assistance from civic leaders of both Tulsa and Oklahoma City.

Scenes State Station. The film, an Eagle Lion release coming to the Saenger Theatre on Sunday, is based on historical fact. Co-starring Susan Hayward and Robert Preston, it portrays the colorful background in the birth of Tulsa as one of the world's greatest oil and cattle regions.

When Wanger sent director Stuart Heisler to the Saenger State for location scouting, Heisler discovered the many picturesque pastures and landmarks of Oklahoma are located in the vicinity of Tulsa. To the consternation of Tulsa's civic leaders, he found the suitable spots nearer Oklahoma City.

Shot in both cities. As a result, practically all the cattle ranch scenes in the film were shot on the outskirts of Oklahoma City, much to the chagrin of loyal residents of Tulsa and environs.

To make things even, the film troupe spent considerable time in the city of Tulsa proper, with the camera showing many of the city's famous landmarks. After seeing the Technicolor film members of the Tulsa Chamber of Commerce contend that when the grassland scenes are viewed they will look so much like Tulsa grazing regions that few will be able to tell the difference.

The private case ranch of Oklahoma's Governor Roy L. Turner, a 12,000-acre estate, was used for one of the many location sites.

Men Who Tried to Save Kathy Well Rewarded

San Marino, Cal., May 28 —(UP)— The 132 men who tried unsuccessfully to rescue three-year-old Kathy Fiscus from death in a 14-inch well today split a $42,813.20 reward.

Thousands of persons all over the United States and several foreign countries contributed to the Kathy Fiscus Rescue fund, Mayor Clark Bell said.

The men worked more than 50 hours in a vain attempt to rescue Kathy after she fell into the well on April 8.

"Our distribution of checks is not in any sense payment for work done but rather is an expression of public admiration for the unselfish efforts of these volunteers," Bell said.

The money was distributed by the fund committee on a point formula based on the time worked, amount of underground labor and availability for work of the men. Most of the men were unemployed.

Don T. Metz, assistant supervisor of the rescue operation, got $927.20, the largest amount. William Yancey, groundhog who spent more time in the rescue shaft than any other worker, and Raymond A. Hill, the engineer in charge, each received $888.40.

Next at $328.40 apiece were A. O. Kelly and H. L. (Whitely) Blickensderfer, who cut through the well pipe to reach the child's body. Other rewards scaled down to less than $100.

A $1,526 reserve was set aside for future claims in behalf of workers not identified. Bell said 12 men, including Hill, had asked that their rewards be put into a memorial fund.

Turk Broda, Toronto goalkeeper, turned in the only shutout of the 1949 Stanley Cup playoff's.
